NEW ORLEANS, June 8.—The Matamoras Ter Publica, the government organ, has an editorial headed "Invasion," severely criticising General McKenzie's expedition into Mexico in pursuits of the Kickapoo Indians, denouncing the act as an aggression committed upon a nation that is too weak to resist and intended to serve as a pretext to seize additional territory.

The government of Mexico is urged to exact immediate separation for this violation of her sovereignty, and concludes by saying that if it is not complied with it will be stated that the Mexico of to-day is not the Mexico of 1846. It is supposed that this article reflects the sentiments of the government received from the City of Mexico by telegraph, and is put forward to test the feelings of the people of the frontier Mexican States.

Dispatches from the front state that General Davis has sent for the settlers to Modoc to get the murderers and stolen property recovered from the settlers.

These people tell the following story: Messrs. Boddy and Schiera took up three-quarter sections of land near the mouth of Lost River, last August, and settled there with their families.

On the 2nd inst. Jack's band were attacked on Lost River by a party of volunteers, and compelled to retire. Hooker Jim and his party of Modocs were on the north side of the river from Captain Jack, but knew of the defeat of the latter, and during the forenoon of the same day Boddy and Shiera were murdered by Hooker Jim and his associates, while they were cutting wood and herding sheep, within a mile of their house and utterly unconscious of danger.

The agent of the Klatox reservation had promised the settlers that any offensive movement against the Indians should be made known to the whites in time to afford them an opportunity to obtain a safe refuge, but the messenger sent by the agent failed to perform his duty, thereby facilitating the massacre, and the arrival of Boddy's train without a driver, and the blood upon the wagon, was the first intimation of the terrible tragedy. The poor women were received before noon. They found the bodies of the murdered men stripped of all their clothing at different points, within a few miles of the house. They also met the Modocs, Hooker Jim, Long Jim, Curly-headed Doctor, Reed Mouse, Rock Dave, Humpy Jerry and Mrs. Hooker Jim, who were all implicated in the massacre. While the Indians went to the house to find other male victims, these women escaped and traveled night and day, suffering many hardships and reached the house of Mr. Rapp in a completely exhausted condition.

General Davis received the women kindly, heard their story, assigned them a tent and promised to assist them to recover their stolen goods.

This morning Hooker Jim and Steamboat Frank, who had just returned from a scout after three or four missing Modocs, were taken to the tent occupied by these women. Hooker Jim was identified by Mrs. Boddy as one of the Indians concerned in the massacre. In response to some remark about the robbery of the house, Hooker Jim said that Long Jim took the long purse, and he (Hooker Jim) took the short purse. At this point of the interview, the women became greatly excited and began crying, when they lost all control of themselves and started in for desperate work. Mrs. Schiera drew a pistol and went for Steamboat Frank, and Mrs. Boddy drew a knife and dashed at Hooker Jim.

General Davis interposed and disarmed both women, reciving in the struggle a slight wound in the palm of his hand near the thumb, by a knife in Mrs. Boddy's hand. The savages during this scene stood like statues. They never spoke nor offered any resistance.

It galls Capt. Jack and his comrades to see Hooker Jim and Steamboat Frank traveling to and fro, and armed at that. He does not understand the consequences of turning State's evidence. This afternoon he became greatly excited and gave vent to his rage in a fiery oration. He rose in his chains with Schonschin, and in a strong and impressive manner recited his grievances. The purport of what he said is told by Scar-faced Charlie. He is mad, says Charlie, to see that the white men do not treat all alike. He also complained that while in the lava beds a portion of his fellow-captives were winning in their sympathies with him. An officer of the guard came in and compelled him to desist in his wailing. There are 131 murderers under guard here at the present time.

ATLANTA.

TUESDAY, JUNE 10, 1873.

☞ Senator Norwood will please accept our thanks for valuable public documents.

☞ We acknowledge the reception of a copy of the premium list of the Kansas State Exhibition, to be held in Topeka, September 22, 23, 24, 25 and 26, 1873.

☞ The Columbia South Carolinian, a daily paper, and an able, unflinching advocate of Democratic principles, is the latest paper death in the South. The list of the dead, at the current rate, will soon exceed that of the living.

☞ The latest Radical revelation relates to Senator Mitchell, of Oregon. He hails from Pennsylvania, and a Pittsburg paper published his early history and real name. He admits that he is living and was elected under an alias Cause: "youthful indiscretion." The Radicals say it makes no difference; that it will not imperil his seat, because there was no mistake as to the individual by the Legislature. A rose, etc.

☞ The contract for building the bridge over the Mississippi River at Atchison was signed at Topeka, Kansas, on the 17th. The contract was secured by the King Bridge Company of Topeka. The price to be paid is $815,700 cash, and the work to be completed in two years.—Chicago Land Owner.

We learn that the King Bridge Company, alluded to in the above extract, have extensive works in Cleveland, Ohio, and from these a bid will come for the building of our Broad street bridge.—[EDS. CONS.]

☞ The Secretary of the Treasury yesterday called in $20,000,000 more five-twenties for payment, interest to cease on September 6; making in all $70,000,000 thus far called in connection with the operations of the Syndicate. The call embraces $16,000,000 of coupon bonds and $4,000,000 of registered. The following are the numbers of the bonds called:

COUPON.—Of $50, Nos. 1,201 to 6,200 inclusive; of $100, Nos. 4,753 to 20,000; of $500, 3,000 to 10,700; of $1,000, 5,734 to 23,600.

REGISTERED BONDS.—$50—1,234 to 1,820. $100—8,804 to 9,500. $500—5,361 to 5,700. $1,000—20,981 to 23,300. $5,000—6,303 to 7,500. $10,000—7,093 to 9,680 inclusive.

The Cholera!

As the people are bound to have a cholera scare, this season, in the absence of a cholera epidemic, we propose to help them out by exhuming a few facts relative to the malignant and dreadfully fatal disease—when it really does prevail. If they are determined to have the cholera, there is nothing like having it intelligently.

Like the plague, it is of Asiatic origin. In 1762 it prevailed extensively in Hindoostan, destroying 30,000 natives, and carrying off 8,000 pilgrims on the river Ganges in eight days. It continued to appear occasionally in India from 1762 up to the great epidemic of 1817, being very uncertain in its course, except, perhaps, a preference for water courses.

On the 19th day of August, 1817, the dread complaint broke out in a small town in the rice marshes at the mouth of the Ganges—the town of Jessore. From this beginning it traversed, with fearful effects, the whole of Hindostan, reaching Bombay in November, 1818, where it destroyed 200,000 persons. Passing through Siam, it visited China, and entered the African coast at Zanguebar. In 1821 it had reached the Tigris and Euphrates, slaying in the city of Bagdat 65,826 in six months. Shortly afterwards it entered Astrakhan, a Russian town on the Caspian Sea; and all this time its desolating havoc continued in India and Tartary.

After an absence of six years it suddenly re-appeared in the Russian provinces, revisiting Astrakhan, spreading through Circassia, and reaching Moscow in September, 1830, and St Petersburg in 1831. Berlin, Hamburg and the principal towns of Prussia felt its fatal power in the Fall of the same year; and on the 2d of March, 1832, it was in London. Calais was the first place attacked in France, and in April Paris entertained the unwelcome guest from the mouth of the Ganges.

On the 8th day of June, 1832, the first case on this continent appeared at Quebec, followed quickly by cases in Montreal. Sixteen days after its first appearance in America, it was in New York; in Philadelphia on the 5th day of July; and in the cities of the West—Cincinnati, Louisville, St. Louis—during the succeeding months of the fall. During the next summer it spread to New Orleans, Mexico and the island of Cuba—leaving this Continent to resume its ravages in Europe. New York and New Orleans were the heaviest sufferers from the American tour of the mysterious and fatal fiend of the air.

In 1848 England and Scotland were revisited; and in 1849 it again crossed the wide ocean to ravage our cities. The deaths in Cincinnati often reached as high as 180 a day in June, 1849. Its subsequent visits were not of an aggravated nature.

The disease, either in the mild or severe form, is not contagious. During its prevalence in Moscow 40,000 persons left the city, and yet not a case was transferred. And so when 10,000 persons fled from Marseilles to Lyons, no case occurred in the latter city. The books are full of facts that prove the disease to be strictly epidemic, originating generally in tropical countries, and spreading from thence, in a somewhat regular geographical course, to colder latitudes.

While the doctors disagree about the qualities of the air upon which epidemical maladies feed, they all agree about some local circumstances that lend them additional force and fatality. In India, exposure to nocturnal cold and damps, great and sudden variations of temperature and fatigue, are known to have powerfully aided the disease. In Moscow it chiefly prevailed in most and low situations. Filth, intemperance, want of physical energy or moral courage, are all important aids of the mystic poison in the air.

Chambers' Encyclopedia lays great stress on the importance of pure drinking-water, and its absolute freedom from contamination by animal matters fil ering through the soil, or thrown into water courses by sewers, etc. If water cannot be had in a pure state it should be be boiled before being used for drink, or indeed for any domestic purpose. Speaking of organic impurities in drinking-water, this Encyclopedia says that no single local cause of cholera has been established by so much evidence.

There is no longer any doubt of the existence of a mild form of cholera in some of our neighboring cities; but it is chiefly and of an epidemical character. It has not come to this country from anywhere else. It is sporadic, scattering, and due to local causes. Let us put our towns in the highest possible sanitary condition, keep clean and cool ourselves, eat and drink temperately, avoid fatigue and exposure to inclement weather; and the usually good health of Georgian towns will not suffer from the sporadic complaints of the Mississippi Valley.

MAKING A VAST FORTUNE

A Famous Old Bank—The Strong Room that Cost $50,000—A Lucky Lancashire Girl—An Evening Dress Worth $500,000—A Woman Worth Tons of Gold.

Everybody has heard of Lady Burdett; but few people know anything about the family to which she was indebted both for her name and her property. She was the daughter of Sir Francis Burdett, the eminent Whig statesman, who left a large family and a small estate. He had married the daughter of Thomas Coutts, the founder of the fortune now possessed by his grandaughter, and of the famous banking house that bears his name; but as the old banker left his property to his widow, who married again, his granddaughter's chances of being a rich woman were by no means flattering. Fortunately for her, Mrs. Coutts, whose second husband was the Duke of St. Albans, secured her vast inheritance in her own hands, and, as her death showed her respect for the memory of old Thomas by leaving it to his favorite grandaughter on condition that she assumed the name of Coutts.

THE BANKING HOUSE.

Down in the Strand, near Temple Bar, is the great banking house of Coutts & Co., as solid and strong as in the lifetime of its founder, and retaining and increasing the aristocratic patronage which he secured for it. The building occupied by the firm is massive and gloomy. Inside and out, everything about it is heavy and solid. The strong room where the safes are kept cost £10,000. Here are safes within safes, containing the title deeds, rent rolls, and priceless valuables of the highest nobility in England. More coronated carriages drive up to this smoky old building than all the other banking houses in London. You may elbow a duke in these quarters, and brush royalty itself, if you are not careful.

THE FIRST DEPOSIT.

The first article deposited in these safes was a magnificent algrette of diamonds, which the Sultan of Turkey took from his turban to place in the hat of Nelson. Lady Burdett Coutts, whose vast fortune is mainly invested in the bank, keeps here all her valuables. Tom Moore writes in his diary, that, on calling one day on the heiress whom he had seen in all her splendor the night before, he found her preparing to send it all back to the bank. She asked him whether he would like to see it by daylight, and, on his assenting, took him to a room up stairs where the treasure was deposited. Among it was the famous tiara of Marie Antoinette. On the poet's inquiry as to the total value of her dress, she answered in her quiet way, "I think about a hundred thousand pounds."

A SHREWD MOVE.

It is curious to know how Thomas Coutts first secured for his banking house the patronage of the aristocracy. At one of his dinners, a city man, gossiping about his business, said a nobleman had applied to him that very day for a loan of £99,000, which he refused to make, because the security offered was not sufficient. Coutts said nothing, but after his guests had gone sent a message to the nobleman requesting the favor of his lordship's attendance at his banking house in the Strand on the following morning. The next day the banker was gratified by receiving a call from the peer, who was himself equally pleased by the tender of a loan for £30 000. As the notes were handed to him, he asked:

"But what security am I to give you?"

"I shall be satisfied," answered Coutts, "with your lordship's note of hand."

The astonished nobleman gave the note, and said at present he should require only £10,000, and wished the banker to open an account with him for the remaining £30,000.

Coutts consented to this arrangement, and had the satisfaction not long after of receiving, in addition to the amount borrowed, a deposit of £20,000, the proceeds of the sale of some family estates which the loan had enabled the nobleman to effect. At his recommendation other members of the aristocracy transferred their accounts to Coutts, who now became the favorite banker of fashionable London.

A LUCKY LANCASHIRE LASS.

Elizabeth, or Betty Starkey, as she was called, was the daughter of a small Lancashire farmer, and to good looks added the more valuable attractions of good sense and good humor. A few days before her marriage she was scrubbing the stairs when one of her master's clerks was about going up to change his clothes. It was a rainy, dirty day, and being anxious to have the work look well, Betty told the young man to take off his shoes so as not to soil the stairs. Instead of doing so, however, the clerk took especial pains to stamp and scrape at every step, in order to dirty them as much as possible. This was too much for Betty, who shouted after him:

"I'll make you pull off your shoes, and your stocking too, whenever I choose it."

On hearing of the approaching marriage the young man expected to be dismissed or made in some way to suffer the consequences of his indiscretion. The young Mrs. Coutts, however, so far from showing her displeasure, was particularly gracious and flattering to him.

Such was her tact and capacity that, notwithstanding her deficiency in culture and refinement, she soon became the equal in manners and intelligence of the ladies to whom her fortunate marriage introduced her. Her daughters were so well brought up that they became the ornaments of the aristocratic circles into which their liberal dowries helped to gain them admission. Sophia, the eldest, married Sir Francis Bardett; Susan, the second, became the Countess of Guilford; and Frances, the third, was made the wife of the Marquis of Bute.

MARRYING AN ACTRESS.

Coutts' liking for bright as well as aristocratic company drew to his dinners many wits, especially those of the theatrical profession, of which he was very fond. In this way he became acquainted with Harriett Mellon, the well known actress, whom he married on the death of his first wife, in 1815. She proved an excellent wife to him, and at his death, seven years after their marriage, at the age of ninety-one, was left in unrestricted possession of all his personal and landed property including a very large share in the immense annual profits of the banking house. Though she afterward married the Duke of St. Albans, Mrs. Coutts did not part with the control of her vast property, which she left, in supposed accordance with her first husband's wishes, to his favorite grandaughter.

Lady Burdett Coutts still retains her interest in the banking house, and her valuables are stored in the strong boxes built by her eccentric grandfather. Some ten years ago it was estimated that her wealth, in the form of sovereigns, would weigh thirteen tons, and fill a hundred and seven flour sacks. The old firm of Coutts & Co., in which she is the principal proprietor, is still the most aristocratic of London bankers, and has just admitted as a partner Lord Walter Campbell, the brother of the Marquis of Lorne.

☞ The Albany Argus says that "if local prohibition was 'shot to death by John A. Dix,' it was buried by a Republican Assembly, the pall-bearers being furnished, rumor says, $100 apiece."

☞ The Memphis Avalanche, in noting the fact that "Local Option" now prevails by statute law in Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Wisconsin, Michigan, and Mississippi, adds: "Laws of this kind can seldom become effective except in increasing the demand for gallon draughts."

☞ The two or three dozen level-headed church goers remaining in the city of New York, are protesting vociferously against the opera style of singing the praise of God, as a part of the regular worship. Moreover from "Portovino," and "Chimes," down with an occasional jig thrown in, is not helping religious growth. The difficulty is, please people who cannot understand protesting when it will do little good, as it is found that much music pays.—Exchange.

THE POLARIS.

The Heroes of the Ice Floe to be Investigated.

Their Arrival in Washington.

The United States steamer Erolle, having on board Captain Tyson and others of the Polaris crew, has arrived in Washington; and the Secretary of the Navy has issued orders that no one shall be allowed to board the Frolic, nor shall any of the Polaris party be permitted to go ashore without his orders.

THE BLACK SHEEP NOT STRANGE.

not an entire stranger in Washington waters, became at once the special object of attraction. As soon as it was known who were to board an anxious crowd lined the wharf, closely watching the movements of everybody on deck, expecting to get a glimpse of the Esquimaux or the wonderful baby. Commander Schoonmaker reported to the Commander of the Navy Yard that he arrived under orders.

SECRETARY ROBESON WANTS IMMEDIATE INVESTIGATION.

Without much delay several scientific officials were gathered, and the Tallapoosa, lying at the same wharf, and having a spacious cabin, was selected as the best place for the examination. At three o'clock Captain Tyson, accompanied by Commander Schoonmaker, came on board, and was introduced to the Secretary and his scientific friends. The maps were unrolled, and the Navy Report full of marks laid on the table. Secretary Robeson prefaced the work with an explanation of what he desired to get from Captain Tyson. He said the government had fitted out the Polaris at great expense, and as it was uncertain whether she would ever be heard from, it was his duty to ascertain, as far as possible, the results of the expedition up to the time of the separation of Captain Tyson and his party from the vessel, what progress was made in the trip northward—in a word, whatever would contribute to the knowledge of the Department relating to the object for which the Polaris was sent out.

BEGINNING THE RECITAL.

Captain Tyson was then requested to narrate everything which came under his notice, from the departure of the Polaris from New York to the time of separation from her. Captain Tyson is exceedingly reticent. His career has been that of a sailor, and but little progress was made during the first hour. After that he became a little more communicative, and as he progressed in the details of the voyage northward his statement was interesting, particularly to Professor Baird, who drew out the character of the animals and natural growth in the frigid climate through which the expedition passed.

TYSON TRACING THE NORTHWARD COURSE.

Here the maps were laid down before Tyson, and he traced, as well as he could, the course of the Polaris beyond the boundaries laid down by the geographers on the maps extant. The examination continued until 10 minutes after six without eliciting anything of special importance. The groundwork for a more thorough examination was gained for the continuation of it to-morrow, and Captain Tyson will be assisted by suggestive questions based on the general instructions prepared by the Smithsonian Institute.

Nothing was said respecting the death of Captain Hall or how he became separated from the Polaris, as the Secretary stated in beginning, the first object of the Government was to aggregate all the facts having any bearing upon the purpose for which the expedition was sent out. The Secretary will endeavor to ascertain all relating to the death of Captain Hall and the separation of Tyson and his party from the ship; in fact, he will, as far as possible, connect this with the history of the expedition.

TYSON PATIENTLY AWAITS THE END.

Respecting the stories of Hall's death he preferred not to talk at present. The Secretary had explained to him the importance of keeping his information for the use of the Navy Department, and, as a verbatim report was to be made the public would have all that skillful questioning could obtain. After that he understood the interviewers of the press might try their hand. Captain Tyson looks very well. His face is bronzed and has more the look of one exposed to a Southern clime than that of a wanderer on an ice floe from the North Pole. After a pleasant chat with the officers, the commander's boat from the Frolic was signalled, and Schoonmaker and Tyson left the Tallapoosa.

MYERS AND THE ESQUIMAUX TO BE EXAMINED.

After Captain Tyson has yielded all he knows, Sergeant Meyers, of the Signal Service Corps, will be examined, and then Joe and Hannah, who were Captain Hall's faithful Esquimaux friends and guides. Hans Christian will also be interrogated as to the country over which the sledge expedition passed.

The crew will probably be examined as to the discipline and treatment on board. After that they will be paid off and discharged.

Captain Tyson will first visit Brooklyn and then go to New London, Conn.

Rev. Mr. Beecher on the Confederate Dead.

The Christian Union, edited by Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, in an article on the proposition to deck the Confederate graves, which was hissed down by the North with nearly unanimous indignation, has the following, which we copy in respect to the general kindness of its spirit:

We recognize, of course, in the protest of these gentlemen a staunch loyalty to their notion of a patriotism which, in itself, admirable. Their mistake, as it seems to us, is a misapprehension of the conditions of the case, both past and present. They assert, and with truth, that after victory so dearly bought as ours there must be no tampering with the spirit which so nearly overcame us. They also assert, and with error, that honor offered to our enemies' dead, or conciliation extended to them living, in such tampering. And here we take issue.

There are two aspects of our late melancholy war which we of the North ought never to forget, and which, practically, we hardly ever remember. One is the fact that, as a community, we did consent to the ever growing encroachments of slavery, of which war was the logical and evitable end. Ours was a baser sin than that of the South. For the South had taught itself to believe that slavery derived its strength from the Bible, and it planted itself on the abstract right of the patriarchal institution. Supple doctors of divinity supplied it with scriptural arguments. The churches, most of them, at least, did not hesitate to fellowship it. The whole South, religiously, was as solidly orthodox as it was solidly slave-holding.

In an enormous agricultural country, where the masses could neither read nor write, and where, naturally, the newspapers had almost no part in the education of the people, it was inevitable that a few orators and political managers should control the community. So that slavery, and the consequent secession were, to a remarkable degree, the honest cause of the whole people. And with a splendid courage and endurance they followed their disunion flag to wounds and death, as simply and bravely as if it had been the banner of the Cross and they the old Crusaders. They were very ignorant and very wrong, but they died for the best cause they knew—their idea of patriotism.

But we who believed slavery to be wrong, who could not lure our consciences to justify it, still accepted and encouraged it through love of gold and desire of an ignoble peace. We taught the South that it could not demand what we should not be found ready to give. And when, at last, slavery threatened our national life, it was the instinct of self-preservation rather than any noble sense of right which prompted resistance. In that golden summer of 1860, we went on gathering and spending, and living luxurious lives, careless of the portents in the sky.

In the early spring of 1861, it was not only the enemies of the Union who doubted its power to preserve its own integrity. It was its friends, the Secretary of State, the commander-in-chief of its army, the great merchants and great lawyers—albeit too often the great preachers of the great cities. There was nothing in the attitude of the Secession almost up to the moment of firing on Fort Sumter, to check the madness of the South. There was everything to indicate that the Union would quietly fall apart.

Because we were by no means ashamed of the war, therefore it behooves us to speak temperately of our fellow-countrymen who were ashamed of their part in it. And we ought never to have thought of the Confederate dead, we could not shut them out from the redemption for which we fought. If the rebel shots were fired in rapid succession, by which Tehee Jack, Foxy and Mooch gave him a wound in the shoulder. Away ahead, on the road in the direction of Boyle's Camp, a cloud of dust was perceived, indicating the approach of a team. The murderers caught the hint, and shouting afterwards were riding rapidly away. Sergeant Murphy, of Battery G, Fourth Artillery, with ten men and a teamster, came up to the scene of the massacre. The Sergeant took charge of affairs and remained with his men on the ground. Fairchild, a teamster, and a wounded squaw with her two children, came in at 2 o'clock this morning.

It is generally supposed that the guilty parties were the Oregon Volunteers. Fair child is of that opinion himself. The warriors killed were not charged with murder. Those who have been here say they have only participated in open fights. Every one here considers the affair as atrocious and without excuse. No doubt exists but that the murders were carried out upon well arranged plan, as Fairchild noticed horsemen on the road ahead and behind them, when shots were fired. Had John Fairchild, instead of James, been present, another murder might have been added to the list, as the Oregonians are bitter in their hatred to John. The old man and other Californians and Warm Spring Indians have only a few weeks longer to serve.

Sergeant Clinton is fast failing.

A second dispatch from Boyle's camp, dated June 8th, 3 P. M., states that an interview between General Davis, Captain Jack and Schonchin has just terminated. The Modoc Chief says he was incited to his criminal warfare by Allen David, Chief of the Klamaths. He also denied having killed Canby, and laid the blame on his boys. Schonchin told the same story.

OREGON.

INTIMIDATING THE INDIANS.

BOYLE'S CAMP, June 9.—General Davis proposes to take the cavalry, a light battery of the Fourth Artillery and infantry and march through the Klamath country to forts Warden and Harney and as far north as Walla Walla, for the purpose of intimidating the Indians. Preliminary orders for this movement have already been issued.

COLLECTING THE MODOC PRISONERS.

FAIRCHILD'S RANCHE, June 8, 3 o'clock A. M.—At 8 o'clock yesterday morning, John Fairchild and brother Burgess, together with Bogus Charlie S. acknasty Jim, left here for Boyle's Camp on the peninsula with the Modoc prisoners captured in this neighborhood. There are other Indians lurking in this vicinity, and they will likely be captured in a few days.

MISSOURI.

ST. LOUIS, June 9.—Dr. D. D. H. Williams, who has resided in Chehnahua two years, has arrived here. Dr. Williams confirms the capture of the Mexican Indian Chief, Lasada. It was believed that he was immediately shot. Dr. Williams thinks there will be no serious complaint over McKenzies incursion after the Kickapoos. Williams, however, thinks the Mexicans will use McKenzie's exploit as a precedent to follow home the marauders into the United States Territory. This will eventually lead to trouble and plunge the frontier into war. Such a result would, however, be hailed by many as desirable, as it would lead to the carving out of another fat slice from Sickman in the Southern border. There are, however, efforts being made by some of the leading parties on the Mexican side of the Rio Grande, which may lead to negotiations for more Mexican Territory in order to strengthen the boundary line, and by which Mexico will be enabled to pay her debts. The Territory for this purpose embraces the States of Uttevo, Leon, Cohahuela, Chuhuahua, the north end of Durango, Sonora, and Lower California, known as the Mexican frontier States. This would shorten the boundary line on half of the present meandering of the Rio Grande and leave the frontier that could be much more easily protected by both nationalities.

Whereas, it is almost impossible to do with the present boundaries, it would be a vast territory with fine irrigable and mineral lands and pasturage which are now nearly worthless to the Mexican people.

SPAIN.

THE NEW SPANISH MINISTRY.

MADRID, June 6.—Shortly after the passage of the resolution definitely proclaiming a Federal Republic, yesterday, the Cortes took a recess until evening. At the night sitting, Senor Piy Maragal announced the following Ministers for ratification by the Chamber:

President of Council and Minister of the Interior, Senor Piy Maragal; Minister of State, Cervera; Minister of Justice, J. Predical; Minister of War, Estevans; Minister of Colonies, Lorri; Minister of Finance, Carvajol; Minister of Marine, Orreino; Minister of Public Works, Palasna.

After an animated debate, the Cortes went into secret session, during which the nominations were approved.

IRELAND.

FIRE—RIOT.

DUBLIN, June 9.—A great fire is raging in the timber yards, and the thieves interrupt the firemen. They stoned a detachment of troops. The troops charged the mob, and many were hurt. The Mayor of the city was hit with a stone. The excitement is fearful.

WASHINGTON.

CONDUCTED WITH CLOSED DOORS.

WASHINGTON, June 9.—The Polaris investigation is now conducted in the large boat house, south of the Admiral's office, with closed doors.

The Tallapoosa having left here last night for Maine with the Esquimaux families of Joe and Hannah on board for the cooler climate of Maine, the remainder of the ice floe party were transferred from the steamer Frolic to a smship Relief this morning, where they will remain until the investigation is concluded. The Frolic left the Navy Yard this afternoon for New York.

The Supreme Court for the District of Columbia have decided the case of Davis vs. Charles H. Hall that the defendant was Consul General in Egypt, and by virtue of his office exercises judicial power in seizing certain goods, in which Daivis had an interest. Judge Carter, in delivering the opinion of the Court, overruled the demurrer, holding that the Consul had, under the law and treaty, been clothed with judicial powers.

In the case of Farragut vs. the ship Metropolis and others, prize case, in which an award of over one million dollars has been awarded by the arbitrators, General Butler moved for an affirmance of the award.

Mr. Corwine filed a motion requiring the arbitrators to file in court the evidence—particularly that of Admirals Porter and Bailey, and also inquiring whether the steamer McRae, having been built and used by the United States, from whose title was taken, should be included among the vessels captured or destroyed. The motion was overruled, and the award was affirmed.

Today the case of Collins against the Florida prize case was argued on and a motion to dismiss the libel filed by the Government, on the ground that the seizure having taken place in a Brazilian port, was illegal. Gen. Butler appeared for the libellant, and Mr. Corwine and Judge Fisher for the government. Judge Humphreys overruled the motion and referred the case to Gen. Muzzy to take testimony that the Florida never reached any port in the United States, having been lost or purposely scuttled on the way. She was built at Liverpool. The Geneva tribunal state in their award that notwithstanding a violation of neutrality of Great Britain, committed by this vessel, then known as the Oreta, she was nevertheless on several occasions freely admitted into ports of British Colonies, and the Tribunal, by a majority of four to one, declared its opinion that Great Britain failed by omission to fulfil the duties prescribed in the treaty at Washington with regard to neutral duties.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

CHARLESTON, June 9.—Ample arrangements have been made by the Masons of this city for the reception of the grandees of Minister Orr.

NEW YORK.

MINISTER ORR.

NEW YORK, June 9.—The Mayor has received Governor Scholz to-day, and the Governor's retinue to escort to the funeral of Minister Orr.

Arrived—Steamers Hecla and Montreal.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE.

NEWBURGH, June 9.—A fire on First street commenced in Wm. Ossaller & Co.'s storehouse and communicated to their barge, Newburgh. The cargo and storehouse was destroyed. The fire extended southward, and the coal yard of D. S. Waring, the barrel factory of James C. French and several other buildings were destroyed. The storehouse of Edwin T. Studwarre is now burning, and the fire threatens to sweep the entire river front of the city. The damage thus inflicted cannot be less than a half million of dollars. The Mayor has telegraphed to Poughkeepsie for help.

LOUISIANA.

ENGLAND.

BURNING OF ALEXANDRIA PALACE.

LONDON, June 9.—The loss by the burning of Alexandria Palace is estimated at three million dollars. The insurance on the structure was six hundred thousand dollars.

The fire was caused by carelessness of some workmen who were repairing the zinc roof. No one was killed, but several were injured. Water was scarce, hence the rapidity with which the fire spread. Within half an hour from the time of the alarm the entire structure was in flames.

The large organ was destroyed, but some valuable pictures and other works of art were saved.

Earl Russell introduced a bill for the better government of Ireland, which abolishes the office of Lord Lieutenant, and provides that the voice of eight of the twelve jurors will suffice for a verdict. The object of the measure is to restrict the power of the priesthood and secure the conviction of criminals.

In pursuance of which the chair appointed Major Crane, Mr. Dunn and Major S. S. Edwards.

On the ion a register and blackboard for the use of the chamber was voted.

We are glad to see this move of the leading merchants of our city. Atlanta has long required something of the kind for the purpose of assisting its business and for regulating the prices of leading articles of trade.

Touching Communion Service at the Central Church.

Last Sabbath was a memorable day in our churches, all being well filled, the sermons able and the exercises intensely interesting.

Central Presbyterian Church.

At this house of worship an overflowing congregation listened in the morning to a sermon from Rev. Mr. Leftwich on a passage from the prophecy of Isiah, 53 chapter—"He is despised and rejected of men." The sermon was intensely earnest, and in the estimation of many the most powerful ever heard within the walls of the Central. Good will come of it.

After the sermon a scene occurred which will long be remembered by the congregation present. Nearly fifty persons were received into membership, and there was scarcely room about the altar for the large number of candidates. Tears of gratitude and joy trickled down the faces of parents, brothers and sisters, as they witnessed their loved ones gather into the fold. Then followed a communion service, some three hundred Christian brethren of various denominations receiving the sacrament together, the entire central block and pews on either side of the pulpit being occupied by the communicants.

Trinity Methodist Church.

The services held here on Sunday were in commemoration of the first anniversary of this church. As the occasion was one of deep interest and importance to the members Bishop George F. Pierce was invited to be present and deliver the discourse. The church was crowded to its utmost capacity, and chairs had to be placed down each of the aisles. Besides the usual congregation, a large number of strangers were present.

Bishop Pierce found his text in the sixth chapter of St. John, and the 35th verse: "And Jesus said unto them, I am the bread of life. He that cometh to me shall never hunger, and he that believeth on me shall never thirst."

Bishop Pierce said:

It was our Saviour's invariable custom to appropriate every incident by which useful lessons could be taught to His hearers. Upon this occasion he had just performed a great miracle, that of feeding five thousand people. This miracle was not done in a corner, but it was wrought openly in the sight of day. The Jews who were around our Saviour, who accompanied Him in His journeyings, and saw the wonderful things that He did, were several times very ready to make Him a temporal king. Christ could supply their earthly wants without labor, by His marvelous power. He could give them bread and meat. In their ignorance they were unable to comprehend what He meant when He spoke of his spiritual kingdom, of the bread of life He could give them, and were therefore unwilling to accept Him as a Messiah.

Christ told them "Labor not for the meat which perisheth," and to believe on Him, saying, "I am the bread upon which if a man eat he shall never die."

These people were a type of a generation to be found in every age of the world. Many people are longing to be christians, but as these Jews, while their sentiments are pious, and sometimes express themselves even in prayer, they don't want the religion of the Bible. You don't want to be damned if you die the death of the unrighteous—you want your own ideas of Heaven realized. These people wanted bread, but not the bread of the Saviour. You must accept a religion, if at all, on God's own terms. Bread has been sometimes called "the staff of life."

This is not a mere figure of speech, it is true, and found in the philosophy of religion. As bread must be passed through a variety of processes before it is ready to be eaten, so the human heart must undergo a great many changes and experiences before it is ready to accept the Saviour.

Christ was not the Saviour of the world because He was man, nor because He was God, but yet because He was both. It was necessary that He should suffer to redeem them that were under the law, and it is through this suffering that the sinner obtains forgiveness. This is the great corner stone of Christianity.

Here the Bishop made an eloquent attack upon infidelity. He said: Men are offended with the truth of their own condemnation. They do not feel it. Perhaps if God had invited your coming, and conferred with you, a different, and to you, more suitable mercy plan of salvation might have been concocted. God is king, law-giver, and judge. The way of salvation has been given you, and it never will be changed. As God is the judge, so he knows what is best.

The Bishop compared an unbeliever to a man refusing bread, because it was not made exactly as he wanted it to be made.

Passing to another part of his text, the Bishop said: We have tried to show what we are to understand by Christ as the bread of life, we will now show how this bread is to be taken and enjoyed. Faith is not an act, but a course of action!—not an incident, but a habit. This receiving the bread of life is not a thing to be done occasionally, but must be done continually.

The danger of postponement lies in this, that a man can't believe just when he wants to. This is not a matter of mere desire or choice. The only reason God regards in dispensing pardon to dying man is the merits of Christ's suffering and death. You must realize this. When a man does realize this, he passes from the darkness of sin to the marvelous light and liberty of the children of God. If our hearts condemn us, God is greater than our hearts and knoweth all things. God makes no sacrifice. If, when truly penitent, we find ourselves in harmony with God on these matters, then we have faith. God hath done great things for them that believe, but yet greater things remain.

This text solves a problem, and contains a secret which I announce to you to day: Happiness consists not in what you have but what you are. Money does not satisfy. The mind hungers at the table of earthly delights, though earth and sea have been searched over to supply them. Unless you come to Jesus you will hunger and thirst till you die.

Finally—The text refers mostly to the future. I shall not attempt to-day to describe the heaven of the righteous. When once there, you shall never hunger or thirst more. Death is a terrible word—the king of terrors. Oh, death is a dreadful day to them that have no God. Dark and desperate is your case without Christ. Hues of mourning dot this assemblage to-day. Our children, relatives and friends drop from around us like leaves in wintry weather. We ourselves feel its admonitions. Is this to be the end? Is there nothing beyond the tomb? Come all to Christ, he will teach you how purely to live—how sweetly to die.

At the conclusion of his discourse, Bishop Pierce alluded to the fact that they were there to celebrate the first anniversary of the church. He spoke of the enterprise and liberality of the congregation. They deserved to raise $12,000 at once to pay off the heavy debt already incurred, and to go on with the building of the church. The money was wanted to day.

The Bishop also praised the architectural design and location of the church. It was calculated to arrest the eye of the stranger, and awaken sentiments of reverence.

It was further announced that while they desired the cash at once, if it was inconvenient to any contributors to pay cash, they could pay half at four months and half at six from date.

We give below a list of some of the heavier contributors. To appreciate fully the generosity of these gentlemen our readers must remember that many of them have given heavily before:

Work upon this beautiful church will be now pushed on rapidly, as we do not doubt but that the remaining $4,000 will be raised without much trouble.

Bible Society Anniversary.

The anniversary meeting occurred at several churches. Rev. Mr. Leftwich presided at the Central Presbyterian. Mr. H. T. Phillips read the report as follows:

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

ATLANTA, Ga., June 8, 1873.

The Atlanta Bible Society:

GENTLEMEN—What is it? The Treasurer's report, just read, emphatically shows that the Atlanta Bible Society is a living, moving, active institution walking to and fro up and down among whom it may serve.

Four thousand five hundred and fifty families have been visited during the past year; 370 found who were without the Bible; 240 of that number were, with 200 children and other persons, supplied with the Holy Scriptures.

The work already done, as shown by the report, is large; yet more, vastly more, remains to be accomplished in this grand and noble work.

The Atlantic Bible Society, as shown by the report, is indebted to the Parent Society [illegible] hundred books the value of which is [illegible]. This debt we desire to discharge, and in addition thereto ask you, to replenish our depleted treasury, that we may be enabled to supply our Depository with the Bible and again send forth the agent to sell and distribute the "Pearl of Great Price," among our own people till every person and family shall have the bread of life.

How much sin of every form has been staged by the dissemination of the "truth" in our own midst, and how great the good yet to be accomplished through the instrumentality of the Atlanta Bible Society, eternity will disclose. When you and I with our friends and neighbors and the great assembled hosts of many the most powerful ever heard within the walls of the Central. Good will come of it.

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

ATLANTA, Ga., June 8, 1873.

The Atlanta Bible Society:

GENTLEMEN—What is it? The Treasurer's report, just read, emphatically shows that the Atlanta Bible Society is a living, moving, active institution walking to and fro up and down among whom it may serve.

Four thousand five hundred and fifty families have been visited during the past year; 370 found who were without the Bible; 240 of that number were, with 200 children and other persons, supplied with the Holy Scriptures.

The work already done, as shown by the report, is large; yet more, vastly more, remains to be accomplished in this grand and noble work.

Observe the battle of revolution among men, in indeed a great Bible work. To disseminate the printed Bible [illegible] and it is, under providence, the agent and work among to this end. The last speaker referred to the possibility for election and stability in our country [illegible] by what is related by Bishop Pierce, a Yankee, who traveled through Asia in the [illegible] years, when there in conversation with what we had done. He stated that all through Turkey and China he found professing christian people who refused to have [illegible] concerning the general issue of the struggle. He found in an interior of the Indian Ocean an Arab Bishop, who ruled other Bishops, ministers and churches, whose polity resembled, and the doctrine was, more apostolic than that of the Roman Church of these days. When in after times these people were visited and became familiar with these countries, their religion of christianity was entirely gone. They had been extirpated by the sword as Mahometan, or swept away in bloody superstitution. Why? It was for the want of a printed Bible—printed without note or comment, thoroughly disseminated among a people who could read it.

The speaker here referred to the origin and history of Bible societies. In 1695 the "Society for the dissemination of Christian Knowledge" was formed in London. This had no special reference to circulating the Bible. To do so was but part of its work. About one hundred years afterwards a missionary named Thomas Charles was laboring among the Welsh. He found great destitution in the Bible supply. He tried to get the society to send a supply, but failed. He then tried to obtain the means by private subscription. This also failed. Finally he went before the managing committee of the tract society, and in words of burning eloquence appealed to them for aid. The Rev. Joseph Hughes, a member of the committee, carried away with the theme, exclaimed, "certainly; and if for Wales, why not for the world?" They called a meeting for the 7th of March, 1804. A German named Steinkopf, gathered statistics as to destitution on the continent, and others in England, Catholics and even Quakers, co-operated. The meeting was large, and much interest was manifested. They raised ample funds, and on that memorable day the British and Foreign Bible Society was formed, with a complete corps of officers.

One month ago that society held its annual meeting. Amongst other interesting facts it was stated that during the year 156,000 Bibles had been distributed in Austria, and 231,000 in Russia, and (in that Germany to which the last speaker had so forcibly referred in its system of education) that the Emperor of Prussia, Old Kaiser William, had presented fourteen copperplates of the society with medals for distributing Bibles among the soldiery during the recent war.

We all have or should have great reverence for Prophets. The privilege of prophecy is of a very high order.

The little boy Samuel, clothed in his linen ephod, and lying on his pallet when he heard the direct voice of Jehovah charging him with a message to Eli, attained to far higher honor than did the splendid warrior and statesman Saul, when long years afterwards that same Samuel anointed and crowned him king. We may none of us attain unto the gift of prophecy but we can aid in spreading and publishing the prophecy among men. The field is large and the fruits inviting this world over.

"Put forth now thy sickle,
Reap North, South, East, West,
The world's wide harvest."

Called Meeting of Council.

ATLANTA, June 9, 1873.

Council met pursuant to call in Recorder's Court room at 8:30 A. M. Present, Hon. C. C. Hammock, Mayor, and Aldermen Morris, Dodd, Bostic, Young, Sparks, Boring, McDuffie, McMillan, Langston, McCaslin, Brotherton and Rice. His Honor Mayor Hammock then addressed the Council as follows:

Gentlemen of Council:

In view of the reported presence of the Asiatic cholera in Memphis, Nashville and other places, I have deemed it advisable to call you together in order to consult as to the necessary steps to be taken against the invasion of this most terrible destroyer of our race. I have also notified the Board of Health to meet us here to-day, that we may recieve from that quarter such suggestions as the health officers may desire to offer.

That the sanitary affairs of our city are in a deplorable state no one undertakes to deny, and that this is due in a great measure to lack of drainage is equally true But to build sewers takes time. A threatened emergency of a grave character is now upon us, and something must be done at once towards cleansing the city, though the means adopted should merely answer a temporary purpose. What those means shall be, we are expected by the citizens to consider and adopt without delay.

Prompt, energetic action is the duty of the hour. The people are aroused upon this vital subject, and look anxiously to us for help. Nor is this on occasion, gentlemen, for us to be cobbled with false notions of economy. Let us not fear to spend money in a cause so absolutely vital, for to preserve the public health is the very highest economy.

Dr. Charles Pinckney, chairman of the Board of Health, addressed Council. There was no subject at the present time that is behooved Council to devote more time than to the sanitary condition of our city.

The Mayor stated truly, that our system of sewerage is defective, but to build sewers requires time. The system of water closets is wrong and the source of disease. Council should at once prepare time and see it as a disinfectant The surface drains should be opened at once. The work of using the disinfectants should be done within the next three days.

Alderman Langston offered a resolution to increase the street force to its original status, divided into four squads, for cleansing streets and alleys, and three hundred barrels of lime purchased, and applied immediately where needed.

Alderman Boring didn't think much of lime as a disinfectant. He preferred copperas. The sewers could not be cleansed without water. The surface drains should be cleansed.

Alderman Brotherton offered a substitute that the marshal be instructed to carry out to the letter the ordinances relative to nuisances that may affect the sanitary condition of the city, and that the street force be subject to his orders for that purpose, and that he be authorized to purchase any amount of lime that may be necessary to effect the work thoroughly, and the Board of Health to superintend said work. Tabled.

Alderman Langston moved to divide his resolution so as to vote on the purchase of the lime at once.

Alderman Brotherton offered an amendment which was accepted, "as many barrels of lime as are necessary in the discretion of the Board of Health, and to be applied under their direction."

The resolution, as amended, was adopted.

The resolution then relative to increase of street force to its original number, and divided into four squads for the purpose of cleansing the streets and alleys was then adopted.

Alderman Brotherton offered a resolution, that the Marshal be instructed to enforce, immediately to the strictest letter of the letter, the ordinance abating nuisance affecting the sanitary condition of the city, which was adopted.

The Street Committee were authorized to apply any remedy necessary to change the direction of the sewer running from the Union Passenger Depot through Captain Harry Jackson's lot to Pryor and Alabama streets, and to remedy the faults of the sewer in Jett's branch.

Court then adjourned.

Two criminal cases were disposed of. George Washington, colored, was tried for cheating and swindling. By way of showing George's little game, we give the material portion of the affidavit, upon which the charge is founded:

The prosecutor, John Robinson, swears that, "On the 7 day of May, 1873, did by using deceitful means and artful practices, defraud and cheat the said John Robinson out of the sum of 25 cents lawful currency of the United States, of the value of 25 cents, by then and there wrongfully, wilfully, knowingly and falsely, representing to the said John Robinson that the sister of him, the said George Washington, was in Judge Bull's office, and that $125 was necessary to get her out of arrest, and to keep her out of the chain gang, and that he, the said George Washington, had all of said sum except 25 cents, and that he wanted said John Robinson to give him said sum for the purpose of getting said pretended sister out of prison."

George was found guilty of the above charge, and sentenced to pay a fine of $25 and costs, or go to the chain gang for three months.

William Monroe, colored, was tried for larceny from the house. The charge was, that, on the 26th day of May, 1873, he stole from the house of Mr. Michael Doyle a sack of flour worth $3. This defendant was also found guilty, and sentenced to pay a fine of $15 and costs or go to the chain gang for twelve months.

Some little civil business was then transacted, and Court adjourned till 9 A. M. to-day.

The ladies of the church and congregation are respectfully asked to contribute all the provisions they can for the benefit of those unable to supply themselves. Also to mark their baskets that they may be returned.

The members of the First Presbyterian church, together with the friends generally of the two churches, are cordially invited to be present. Every effort will be made to keep the picnic as select in its attendance as it will be free from disorder.

All intending to go must be at the car shed promptly before eight o'clock, as the train leaves at ten minutes past eight.

THE DAILY CONSTITUTION

M. H. B's New York Letter to St. Louis Republican.]

The latest French mode dresses a lady no more; they are mere draperies, with tearfully low necks, absent of all sleeves, a mere strap going over the naked shoulder, fastening the dress at the small of the back and at the pit of the stomach. The skirt is strangely and wonderfully hung. It caps the folds; it is caught high at the hip, or in the back, and is shaped tight about the entire figure. From beneath this drapery streams out a two-yard train. One door eulogizes the other, for the drapery is constructed in the same style.

These fashions demand revolving pedestals, and what dancers term the "slow movement." No dress of this kind could be taken on its owner's back in a hurry anywhere. Of course corsets and a good many other articles of underwear hitherto been deemed indispensable will have to be taken off for the "Empire" waist. At a very swell wedding reception lately the high-toned belles held their arms like trussed fowls, to prevent the silk and lace suspenders that did duty as dress waists from falling off their shoulders. The same bridal party were, to the number of a dozen, photographed, and if I were to send a copy up to Connecticut, I'd not only be prayed for in the churches as one lost, but I'd be liable to indictment for sending indecent pictures by mail.

No gloves! That's dreadful for nice looks! No corsets! That's bad for comfort. And no waists to our dresses! and that's going to be cold for summer, if it possesses no other decided advantage.

A Girl Who Never Saw a Young Man.

An old man who lives near St. Helena, California, in a wild solitude, has a very pretty daughter, aged 19, who had probably never seen a young man till her father took her to San Francisco the other day to see the town. She was dressed up prettily, for the first time in her life, and her silks and ribbons and the gay sights almost turned her head. But what most interested her was that hitherto unknown being—the young man.

Every time she saw one she would fix her eyes earnestly on him, and she actually made several attempts to get away from the old man, that she might cultivate the acquaintance of these young gentlemen, so that he finally caught her and led her by the hand. After he got her on the boat for Vallejo, on the homeward trip, he felt pretty safe and concluded to take a drink. He took several, and in his absence the daughter made the acquaintance of two sprightly young men on the boat, and she was so fascinated with male society that she made arrangements to forsake her old father and go with them.

She successfully gave her father the slip when they left the boat for the cars, and the infatuated girl was stowed between them in a smoking car. But her father found her and whirled her out of that car in the liveliest manner, and kept his hands on her till they reached home. He will not dare expose her to such peril again, and the poor girl is destined to close confinement out of the world of young men unless she runs away.

How "Greenback" Paper is Made.

All the paper for the money issued by the Government is manufactured at the Glen Mills, near West Chester, Pa. Short pieces of red silk are mixed with the pulp in the engine, and the finished stuff is conducted to the wire without passing through any screens, which might retain the silk threads. By an arrangement above the wire cloth, a shower of short pieces of fine blue silk thread is dropped in streaks upon the paper while it is being formed.

The upper side, on which the blue silk is dropped, is the one used for the face of the notes, and, from the manner in which the threads are applied, must show them more distinctly than the lower or reverse side, although they are embedded deeply enough to remain fixed. The mill is guarded by officials night and day to prevent the abstraction of any paper.

THE CONCENTRATED VEGETABLE SPECIFIC is a true Purifier of the Blood. It thoroughly neutralizes and eliminates from the system the specific virus which causes such a long list of human suffering.

In every form of scrofulous, mercurial and constitutional blood complaints it stands without compeer, rapidly curing ulcers, pustules, carbuncles, scald head, salt rheum, and the 88 different varieties of skin affections. It is a positive curative for scrofula, and the deadly tyranny of mercury, lead and arsenic, quickly eliminates them from the system. The Fluid Extract of Queens delight, prepared by Dr. J. S. Pemberton, has made the most wonderful and astonishing cures. Its purifying, vivifying and tonic properties exercise the quickest and most powerful effects in restoring health. It is harmless to the most delicate, and can never be used amiss. It is the true beautifier of the complexion. If you want pure rich blood, clear skin and beautiful complexion, use the Compound Extract of Stillingia or Queens Delight. Read our treatise on diseases of the blood. The startling drawback on nearly all medicinal agents has ever been that in their process of purgation and purification they have also debilitated the system. To obviate this difficulty physicians have long sought for the agent that would

PURGE, PURIFY AND STRENGTHEN

At one and the same time.

Their research has at last been rewarded by a discovery which fall realizes the fondest desires of the medical faculty, and which is justly regarded as the most important triumph that Pharmacy has ever achieved The important desideratum is

Dr. Tutt's Vegetable Liver Pill.

Which purify the blood and remove all corrupt humors and unhealthy accumulations from the body, and yet produces no weakness or lassitude whatever, but on the contrary tones the stomach, and invigorates the body during the progress of their operation. They unite the heretofore irreconcilable qualities of a STRENGTHENING PURGATIVE and PURIFYING TONIC.

Dr. Tutt's Pills are the most active and searching medicine in existence. They at once attack the very root of diseases, and their action is so prompt that in an hour or two after they are taken the patient is aware of their powerful effect. They may be taken at any time without restraint of diet or occupation; they produce neither nausea, griping or debility, and as a family medicine they have no rival

To the Most Powerful Cleanser, strengthener and remover of Glandular Obstructions known to Materia Medica.

It is especially adapted to constitutions worn down and debilitated by the warm weather of Spring and Summer, when the blood is not in active circulation, consequently gathering impurities from stagnantness and imperfect action of the secretive organs, as is manifested by Tumors, Eruptions, Blotches, Boils, Carbuncles, Scrofula, etc., etc.

When Sadly and languid from overwork; and disease, drowsiness and inertia take the place of energy and vigor, the system needs a tonic to build it up and rally the Vital Forces to regain their recuperative power.

In the heat of Summer, frequently the Liver and Blood do not properly perform their functions; the germs and Urinary Organs are inactive, producing weakness of the stomach and intestines and a predisposition to a bilious derangement.

DR. WHEELER'S EXTRACT OF JURUBEBA

Is DIRECTLY from the GOOD'S HEAD. It is peculiarly suited to all these difficulties: It will clean the KIDNEYS and BLADDER from all OBSTRUCTIONS from IMPAIRED and LOW STATE of Organs.

It should be only taken, as Jurubeba is a concentrated, powerful writer, the most efficient Vegetable Tonic and DEOXYDIZER known in therapeutics.
